international business, e-commerce, data analytics, sustainability, CSR, urban planning and development. While there are many who prefer to work for various public and private sector organisations, there are others who believe in taking the big leap and move ahead to become entrepreneurs and business magnates. A course in management equips one with a broad understanding of business today apart from the practical management skills required to be a successful manager.

As management is a skill which is scarcely found in people, a person with a degree in management will be acknowledged immediately and hired by an organisation. And experienced candidates find themselves flooded with growth opportunities as investment bankers, investment advisors, management consultants, marketing head, zonal head in sales, finance managers and HR heads in various organisations.

With around 4000 colleges imparting courses in management in India, it becomes difficult for a student to make a clear choice about the college he or she wants to join. The B-schools can be broadly divided into two categories: public and private. Unlike the public B-schools that are aided by the Government of India, the private MBA colleges are funded by private trusts or individuals.

LAW

Law and the legal provisions affect every part of our lives and enable us to differentiate between the whimsical view point from the practical view point apart from strengthening one's mind and sharpening one's understanding regarding the various aspects of human life.

With a number of advantages as acquiring in-depth knowledge of the legal statutes, ability to look at things and analyse them in the bigger perspective, going to the root of the problem to solve them legally, ability to talk about law effectively, the prestige and the high
